

Application Instructions

Program you are interested in:

- What McMaster Program are you applying to?
- When do you wish to start?
- Are you considering full or part-time study?

Research interests:

Please tell me what you are interested in studying during your graduate degree, and how this connects to your previous education and experiences. Your research interests should align with mine, if you don't think this will be obvious, please help me make the connection by telling me how I will be able to support your academic development through my topic, methodological, or content expertise. If you can't see a clear connection between your interests and mine, I'm probably not the right supervisor for you.

If your research interests entail working with a specific, identifiable population, please comment on your relationship to this community.

Educational and Professional Background:

Please tell me about your previous academic and professional training, as well as any relevant professional or volunteer work you have undertaken. This doesn't need to be a complete CV, a statement such as "I completed my B.A. in Philosophy at Western University (2019), Master's of Public Health at the University of Toronto (2021) and have worked for two years as a policy analyst for PHAC focus on public health ethics" is sufficient.

Academic Writing Sample:

An academic writing sample is helpful for me to assess your academic preparation, clarity of communication, and critical thinking. Your academic writing sample can be anything you have written independently, such as a course paper, thesis, report. Please do not send co-written or professionally editing documents, such as journal articles.
